About Halal Research Council:

Halal Research Council is an organization working globally on Halal certifications in order to cater the needs of food and nutrition agencies and side by side non - food agencies especially in the FMCG sectors. Halal Research Council certifies products through expert evaluation, scrutinizing ingredients, supply chains, chemical composition, and Shariah compliance. Led by a Shariah Supervisory Board, Food Technologists, Chemical Engineers, and R&D Professionals ensure highest Halal standards.

About Halal Industry:

The global halal industry is growing rapidly across multiple sectors, driven by increasing consumer demand, technological advancements, and ethical considerations. With the expansion of halal certification, innovative products, and services like halal tourism, the industry is becoming more diverse and integrated into the global economy. However, challenges such as certification standardization and ensuring sustainability need to be addressed to fully unlock the potential of this burgeoning market.
